

Unhelpful Thinking Styles

Thoughts and feelings are directly connected with each other and experiencing unhelpful emotions, such as depression or anxiety, are usually preceded by a number of cognitive distortions. Often there is a pattern to such thoughts and those can be summarized in roughly three categories of unhelpful thinking styles; (1) thinking in extremes, (2) getting lost in predictions, and (3) applying lots of judgement.

